Q: How to write differential test for string I have a test where I read in this string: { "email": "email here", "age": { "min": 30, "max": 40 }, "password": { "value": "password here", "bitLength": 16, "salt": "salt here" }, "address": { "street": "address here", "city": "city here" } } Is there anyway to test that the email, age, password, and address all have the correct values in place? The number values for age, email, password, and address are known, so I need to test their values, not their equality (a number is compared with a number, not a string). The email and password are strings. The age is an object. The address is an object as well, but it contains no comma in it. I'm assuming I'll have to use JSON.parse to grab them and do my tests, but I'm a little lost as to what to test. A: Yes, JSON.parse is the way to go. Assuming it returns an object similar to yours: { "address": { "street": "address here", "city": "city here" }, "age": { "min": 30, "max": 40 }, "email": "email here", "password": "password here", "address": "address here" } To test let parsedObj = JSON.parse(jsonString) if(parsedObj.address.city == "city here") { // do something } A: Use JSON.parse to convert the string into object, then you can use any javascript code on the object to check the data. Q: Strange behaviour of FOR loop with variable as a range I have a simple for loop: Dim i As Integer Dim x As Integer For i = 1 To 3 x = Range("A" & i).Value Msg

B) Tool: Marqe Source: To draw with a brush in Adobe Photoshop is the same as drawing with a crayon and a few other basic tools. There are a number of ways to select a brush, but the most commonly used technique is to click with your cursor over the brush, which makes the brush a temporary selection. You can also drag a brush onto an area on your screen where you want to paint, as if the brush were a crayon and you were drawing a picture. When the picture is complete, you need to make it permanent by choosing one of the preset options. Once this is done, you can copy the picture or draw over it again by selecting it with a different brush. When you use a brush you can vary the radius of a brush tip, its color, opacity and size. All the above mentioned parameters can be changed by holding down the Ctrl or Command key while using the Brush. The brush you choose determines the outcome of your painting. There are three types of brushes which are described in the following: The Traced Brush is a clone brush that uses a single point as a starting point. It has a rectangular shape. The color of the stroke depends on the color of the pen on which it was traced. A traced brush is a very useful tool to fill a photo with a cool color. The Bucket Brush is a circular brush, with one or more points that are arranged in a circle. The color of the brush depends on the color of the pen on which it was traced. It may be used to copy colors or change the color of an image or a layer. You can move the cursor on the canvas to move the circle. The Spray Brush is a brush that sprays out a fine stream of paint over the entire canvas. The spray is colored by the color of the pen on which it was traced. The Brush Tip Shape determines what kind of point you paint with. There are 3 different shapes to choose from: Pencil, Round and Square. When you use a pen tool, you will find a selection box on the canvas where the pen has ended its writing. When you click in a new place on the canvas, you will be asked to select a new color. There are 3 different types of color sampling tools: Color Wheel, Color Picker and Overlapping. The Color Wheel has a circular hue slider in the center. If you click and drag a cursor around the dial, your pen will move along
